Daniel Tries Something New

By Holland White

Many people speak two languages. That is called bilingual. (9)

Some people speak one language. Others speak two. (17)

Daniel speaks Vietnamese and English. He uses Vietnamese at home. (27)

He learned English at school. One day he helped his mom read a recipe. (41)

He felt proud to be a translator. Later, he saw a word in Spanish he didn't know. (58)

Daniel felt unsure of his translation. But he kept trying. Now he wants to learn more! (74)

Discussion Questions

Day 1:

- What does it mean to be bilingual?

Day 2:

- How do you use your bilingual skills?
- Do you think bilingualism is a superpower?

Angel the Translator

By Holland White

Angel is in 5th grade. (5)

He feels proud to help his family. (12)

He fills out forms. (16)

He gives directions. (19)

He even talks to people at the bank. (27)

At home, Angel's family speaks Spanish. (33)

His parents are learning English, but they work long hours. (43)

They count on Angel to help. (49)

Sometimes, Angel gets tired. (53)

He knows many words in both English and Spanish, but not always the same ones. (68)

He feels disappointed when he can't find the right word. (78)

He feels unsure if he translated something right. (86)

One day, Angel wants to go on a field trip. (96)

The permission slip is in English. (102)

Angel tries to read it, but some parts are too hard. (113)

He gets a premonition — a strong feeling he might need help. (124)

He worries the school might distrust him if he fills it out wrong. (137)

He sees a hard part about “submitting” forms online. (146)

He feels stuck. (149)

At last, he asks his teacher. (155)

She makes a new copy in Spanish, Arabic, and English. (165)

Angel smiles. (167)

He is unafraid to ask now. (173)

He is not the only helper anymore. (180)

Learning and Translating

By Holland White

Many people around the world speak more than one language. (10)

In fact, over half of the world's population is bilingual or multilingual. (22)

In the United States, fewer people know more than one language, but those who do can gain many benefits. (41)

Speaking two languages can improve how fast your brain solves problems. (52)

You can connect with more people and understand their points of view. (64)

You can also add new words and ideas to your thinking. (75)

Kevin speaks both Vietnamese and English. (81)

His family uses Vietnamese at home, and he learned English at school. (93)

He once translated a chicken and dumpling recipe into Vietnamese so his mom could make it. (109)

She even added fish sauce — and it tasted even better! (119)

One day, Kevin got discouraged when he didn't know a Spanish word. (131)

He felt uncertain about trying a third language. (139)

He read the subtitles on his friend's Spanish shows. (148)

He looked for short words he knew. (155)

Now Kevin wants to learn even more. (162)

His teacher said knowing two languages can make learning a third easier. (174)

Being unafraid to try helps too! (180)

Day in the Life of a Translator

By Holland White

Did you know that translation is a profession with global demand? (11)

Translators are individuals who rewrite texts or speech from one language into another. (24)

Their job is unlike any other because it requires attention to both meaning and culture. (39)

Some translators work remotely, completing assignments for international companies. (48)

They might reformat directions, submit revised scripts, or discard incorrect drafts. (59)

Every sentence must be checked for tone and clarity. (68)

Miriam's aunt, for instance, is employed as a translator at the United Nations. (81)

Official documents are submitted to her daily in English and French. (92)

These are translated into Arabic. (97)

Her work must not be misinterpreted, as even a small error could undermine diplomacy. (111)

Although machine translators—such as apps or voice tools—are widely used, they often fail to capture idioms or intent. (131)

Important subtext may be misunderstood or unrecognized. (138)

Because of these challenges, human translators remain essential. (146)

Their work substantially improves understanding and reduces miscommunication. (154)

In fact, their careful language choices help promote peace across borders. (165)

- Culture – The traditions, beliefs, and ways people do things

Why We Still Need Human Translators (Even with Super Smart AI!)

Fluency Level: C | Lexile: ~890L

Have you ever used Google Translate or Duolingo? Pretty cool, right? You type something in one language, and—bam!—you get it in another. Some apps even talk for you in real time! It feels like we're living in the future.

So... if apps can do all that, why are people still getting paid to translate, or to change one language to another?

Here's the thing: AI is smart, but it's not perfect. We still need translators, who are people who rewrite texts or speech from one language into another.

First, computers don't always "get" people. If someone says, "That movie was fire," a human knows it means "awesome," not that the theater caught on fire. But AI might get confused and totally mess it up.

Second, humans understand the culture of a community. They know when to be funny, serious, polite, or casual—things AI can't always figure out. This matters a lot in places like hospitals, courtrooms, or during important meetings. Human translators make careful language choices when translating official documents.

Also, not every language has enough data for AI to learn from. That means it can be great at Spanish or French... but not so great at languages like Zulu or Khmer. Humans? They're amazing at all of it.

Even big tech companies and international companies still hire real people with language skills to be translators. Why? Because humans catch mistakes, sound more natural, and keep the message friendly. These are the benefits of human translators.

So, if you speak more than one language, you've got a superpower—one that even robots can't steal.

Today's Guiding Question:

How do prefixes help us understand the meaning of a word?

Prefix Practice

Prefixes are parts added to the beginning of words. They change the meaning of the word.

Today's prefixes:

- un- = not or opposite
- dis- = not or opposite
- sub- = under or below

Practice:

Write each word, circle the prefix, and underline the base word. Then write the meaning.

1. unhappy = un + happy = not happy
2. dislike = _____ + _____ = _____
3. submarine = _____ + _____ = _____
4. dishonest = _____ + _____ = _____
5. submit = _____ + _____ = _____
6. unknown = _____ + _____ = _____

Challenge: Add one example from your home language that uses a similar prefix.

The Work of a Translator

Translators do important work. They _____ words from one language to another so more people can _____ what is said. Some work online, while others _____ papers for school or work. One translator told me she likes to _____ hard words and find the best ones to match. Good translators do not just _____ or _____. They _____ ideas and _____ the best choices. They may have to _____ their work more than once or _____ others see what the message really means. Even if people seem to _____ someone's ideas or words, they may just _____ what the person is truly trying to say. That is why translators matter.

How Can Translators Shape People's Actions?

Fluency Level: Lexile ~960L

Word Count: 340

During a time called the Vietnam War, which lasted from 1955 to 1975, people in the country of Vietnam were caught in a long and painful conflict. The war was between North Vietnam and South Vietnam, which was supported by the United States and others who wanted to stop Communism.

As soldiers fought with weapons, others used a different kind of tool: language. One of the most powerful voices of the war didn't come from a general—it came from a translator on the radio.

Her name was Trĩnh Thị Ngĩ, but American soldiers knew her as Hanoi Hannah. She worked for North Vietnam and spoke English on the radio to U.S. troops. She was bilingual, using both Vietnamese and English. Every day, she translated news reports, shared emotional messages, and played sad music. She even read the names of American soldiers who had died and said where they were from.

Hanoi Hannah's job was to make soldiers feel scared, homesick, or unsure about why they were fighting. Her careful language choices impacted soldiers' actions, even changing their minds about fighting. She believed her words could make them leave the war and go home. Some soldiers laughed at her, but others said her messages made them think.

Trĩnh Ngĩ learned English by listening to the radio. She was a careful speaker, using her voice to send strong messages. She believed in her work and saw language as a way to fight—not with bombs, but with ideas.

Hanoi Hannah's story shows how a translator can shape people's actions. By using bilingual skills and choosing words carefully, translators can stir emotions, change opinions, and even affect history.
